JavaScript React.js Developer

Extracto

Front-End web developer with more than ten years of experience in development and implementation of systems and websites. I've worked in both front and back-end development with various languages, libraries and frameworks. (Php, Yii, Laravel, Vue.js Wordpress, Drupal, HTML/CSS ActionScript and more) I also have experience in UI/UX design.

Currently, I specialize in JavaScript, a language that I consider to be very versatile and powerful. I use Node.js and React.js as my main development tools.

I feel that I am a self-motivated and self-taught person, which is something I believe to be extremely important in such a changing technological world. I like to stay up-to-date with the latest technology on the market and follow the best development practices.

I have over ten years as a freelance professional. I started my career as a graphic designer in 2002, shortly after that, I started to take up an interest in development and I began to focus mainly on that. Being familiar with both areas gives me the possibility to completely develop applications and websites without having to depend on third parties, taking on UI/UX tasks and programming (Front and Back-End)

I consider Freelance work to be a very enriching experience in many aspects due to the fact that this implies honing certain fundamental skills such as managing clients, organization, self-promotion, negotiation, quoting and consultations and legal and monetary issues.

"I worked with Pablo during my time at Elevation and, in my opinion, he was a great technical resource who was always willing to give a hand where needed. We worked on different teams, but our teams were constantly collaborating as our group of project/client managers would always have to work in tandem with the developers. Pablo's exceptional professionalism and quality of work made for a great experience as a co-worker and I'd recommend him to any company who is looking to incorporate serious developers to their team."
